INTRODUCTION

TWO years ago I opened my shop in Flushing, Long Island. I have been asked innumerable times why I located in Flushing instead of Manhattan. Apparently the fact had not been taken into consideration that Flushing is in as close proximity to Forty-Second Street as are the much more expensive mid-uptown sections.

In locating in Flushing the sole purpose I had in mind was to sell a high grade of material without the added high overhead. I have always considered the item of overhead as vital to the antique business as it is to any mercantile enterprise.

It is enough to say that many of my patrons have "found" me, and as the word goes round I am sure more will stop in for a pleasant half hour.

Because of my inability to resist purchasing beautiful and unusual things, my stock has grown until it is elbowing out at all sides of my two old buildings, which, while they give a charming setting to the antique, have too many halls and stairways to be practical.

I have decided that during the Winter months this condition must be rectified by certain alterations and additions, giving me an opportunity in the Spring to "carry on" in a more harmonious manner.

I have always carried a large and varied stock, and in order to make the necessary alterations properly, have considered it advisable to sell by Auction, my larger pieces, together with a large assortment of fine old glass for which I am known.

Such a sale, being a representative assemblage from my stock, will serve as an advertising medium, placing directly before the buying public the ideals and ideas which I have fostered, and displaying my taste to the Collectors.
